SUR MUNDY'S GANG-A CHAPTER OF ROBagnies and Murders .- On Saturday last, a gang of twelve guerillas, led by Sue Mundy and a secondrel named Dick Mitchell, started on a tonr of robbery and murder, and the outlaws were quite successful. They first visited Springfield, robbed the stores and private parties of about two thousand dollars in money and property, and, without provocation, shot two citizens down in cold blood. T. W. Lee, a wagonmaker, was one of the murdered men, and Wetherton, a shoemaker, was the other. The marauders then started from the town, paid a visit to the villages of Texas and Pottsville, and robbed each of them of small amounts. Just after dark, on Friday night, the town of Perryville was thrown into a commotion by a report being brought In that a haud of guerillas, said to be one hundred strong, was approaching the place hy way of Mackville. The citizens were terribly excited, and a number of them were up keeping watch over the town all night. They were without arms, and came to the conclusion, that, If the force was as large as represented, it would be useless to attempt t offer any resistance. About two o'clock P. M. the next day. See Mandy dashed into the town at the head of her gaag of twelve men, which, it appears, report had magnified into one hun dred. An unusual number of men and women were in the streets at the time, and, in less than fifteen minutes, under the effects of a pistol ar-he scoundrela did not dismonnt from their forses, but rode up to store-doors, and made the merchants bring to them the con tents of their money-drawers. Money appeared to be the sole object of their raid, as they earried away with them but little, If any, goods. They "confiscated" several horses and saddles. A young man named Lawson, a Federal soldier, was shot and mortally wounded while in the act of handing over his purse. The miscreant guilty of the cowardly outrage claimed that the shooting was an accident. The gang did not remain in the town more than twenty minutes-From Perryville the outlaws moved to Nevada, thence to Cornishville. When last heard from, they were at Bloomfield. About an honr after they had departed from Perryville, Captaine Fiddler and Wharton, from Lebanon, in command of a detachment of soldiers and armed citizens, arrived and pushed forward in hot pursuit. We did not learn with what success the pursuers met. It is falr to presume that they dld not overtake the outlaws. As a general thing, a scout manages to keep about one hour helind the force that it is sent In pursuit of. Surely, if a proper effort was made, some means could be devised for the capture of Sue Mundy and her horse-thieving murdering gaug. If the citlzens would exhibit a spirit of hravery worthy of Kentuckians, the handful of marauders might be picked up and turned over to the military authorities as prison ers without anybody getting very badly hurt.

CAPTURE OF STEAMBOATS.—On last Saturday night three steamboats, the Prima Donne, Magville. Nine miles below the former city, and was in the lead, was fired upon and brought to each side of a ravine so as to sweep the river in both directions. The Prima Donna came up and had a shot fired through her pilot-house, and was also captured. The Magnet last approached and ran the first battery, when the other hattery opened upon her and she followed the example of her two predecessors. The gunhoat Carondelet being notified of the affair ran down and sent a few shots into the rebel batteries, which compelled them to retreat, leaving the boats in our possession. The rebels carried off all the Priura Donna's craw except the Captain, his son, and the pilot. They set fire to the because becore leaving, but the crews of the other boots sureceded in extinguishing the flames. A private of one of the rebel batteries had his log shot off by a shell from the Carondelet. The tirst and second chamber maids of the Prima Donna were killed by a shell from the gunboat. The Magnet's crew all go off safely. Commodere Fitch seted with promptness and energy in the matter.

THE REUEL GENERAL CLERERYE .- Gen Pat rick R. Cleburne, who, it is stated, was killed in the hattle of Franklin, was horn near Queenstown, Ireland, March 17, 1828, and was couse queutly in his 37th year. At the age of 19 ho enlisted in the British 41-t infantry, and served as a private for three years. He then emigrated to this country, and, settling at Helena, Ark., studied law with Chief Justice Hanly of that State. He was successfully engaged in the practice of his profession when the war broke out. He collisted as a private when the war broke out, but was soon promoted to a Coloneley. In Murch, 1862, he was commissioned a full Brigadier, and commanded the left brigade of the first line at Shiloh. He was wounded at the battle of Perryville. In December, 1862, he was mede a Major-General, and placed over one of the divisious of Ilardee's corps. He afterwards fought at Mmfreesboro, Chickamauga, and Mission Ridge, and received the thanks of the rebel Congress for his defence of Ringgold Gap. At Jonesboro, he covered the retreat of Hood's defeated army. He was in command of his old di-7ision at Franklin when killed. Gen. Cloburne was very popular with both officers and men, of commanding presence, and a skilful and daring

Another Incident of the Raid upon New CREEK .- When the rebels came into New Creek on Monday last there was a gentleman at the station who had in his possession two packages of mouey, one containing eight thousand and one containing two thousand dollars. He gave the eight thousand dollar package to a woman for safe-keeping, and took to his heels. In runnlug through the woods, the rebels in close pursuit-for they invariably ran after those who attempted to run away-he stumbled and fell down, dropplag the remaining package of money behind a large rock. Seeing that ho was certain to be captured, he did not attempt to pick up the money, and was soon afterward selzed and taken away. He subsequently succeeded in making his escapo, and, returning to the station, found his money still lying where ho had accidentally dropped it. He then weut after the woman with whom he had left the more valuable package, but she could not be found. She had taken her departnre to parts unknown, elther through fear of the rebels or with a design of defrauding the ualucky gentleman. At last accounts, the gentleman was still in anxious search of the lady, of whom he had not been able to find a trace ..

She says that this was done against her will, and that while the fightling was going on at the jah she was tied to another woman to prevent her from attempting to escape.

We suspect, however, that she was tied only by the gentle cords of love, and that a Maori warrior had something to do with her presence there. When the pah was evacuated she was hit by a hullet, which shattered her arm. It would have gone hard with her, in the indiscininate shaughter which easued, had not some brave fellow stood over her and defended her life. The following caps the climax of bets: A young lady in East Vincent, Pa., had an offer of marriage from a young gentlemen as follows: That if General McClellan was elected, he would marry her, to which she acceded; and if he was not elected, she was to stay single four years longer. Four years is a long period in the life of a marriageable young lady.

Shore for Wornes.—A correspondent of the Country Gentleman mentioned the case of a horse, which was just ready to die of au old and festered wound. Fortunately, he adds, at this stage of the case, an old Pennsylvania teamster came to our relief and recommended smeking with old shores. A smoke was made of old shoes, soles and all, cut in pieces, in a hog-trough, and placed under the swollen parts. In a few hours the swelling wholly subsided, and the sore commenced ddischarging matter—the horse was saved. the horse was saved.

Some years after this I heard two persons talking about a horse that had been gorged in the abounen. In this case everything had been tried in vain. The poor creature must die. At my suggestion he was smoked, and when I next heard from him the old horse was well. So much for old wounds,

In the same year I cut my foot with an axe. The lady of the house, selzing the foot while it was 12 bleeding freely, held it over a pan containing smoking tag-logs. In a few minutes the bleeding stopped, and the smoke was removed, and a handage applied to protect it from secidental hlows. The wound never maturated, and consequently never pained me. 'I have seen to is remedy tried in many similar cases, and always with same results. Let the reader hear in mind that no liniment or salve, drawing or healing, should be applied. I suppose the smoke of burning wood would produce the same results, but it would not he so manageable. There is a principle in the smoke of wood which, when applied to the ficeh, coagulates the albumen, thus rendering it unsusceptible of puturisaction. The same principle stops bleeding by coagulating the blood. It promotes healing, and may be applied with decided benefit to almost all ulcers, wounds, and cutaneous diseases. He gathered his immense army on the Dourso, and, as it crossed the boundary of Spain, the great ecommander, in his cuthusiasm, rose in his stirrups, and, waving his hand, exclaimed "barewell, Portugal!" He cut loose cutirely treu his base of supplies at Lisbon and started for the ports in northeastern Spain, where a British field and British fransports could come to his aid. But he had to fight his way. King Joseph, Napoleon's brother, with his weary army, was before him. We need not now pause to tell how the great English captain, by one of the most brilliant pieces of strategy he ever devised, severed the connection of the French with the coast, drove them pell-mell up the rugged miles in six weeks, fighting as he went,

When the command to the best of his ability. When the command arrived in the vicinity of the Indians, and a battle was expected at any time, the General thought he would examine Captain P, on his proficiency in nriillery tactics, and perhaps have a little fun at the Captain's ignorance. So when the command had hatted, and a large number of officers were near, the General says: "P, suppose we should get into a fight with the Indians, and they should attack our flank where your leatery was stationed, what would you do?" "Hand my horse to an orderly and get into an ambulance, sir," was the prompt reply. The examination was adjourned to take a d—k. Nioux City Register.

Vandalism Extraoriunary.—We announced a few days since the donation of a number of important fossils and casts of fossils to the State Cabinet by Chailes F. Some wretch or wretches obtained access into the hall Wednesday afternoou and mutilated the monster by wrenehing off his kree-pans and inflicting other niguries! It was done during visiting hours, and prohably while several persons were in the room. There could have been no possible motive for this set of validalism except to destroy for the sake of destruction. It could hardly have been inspired by personal revenge or malice; for nothing had been done so far as is known, either by the denser or those in charge of the Itall, to provoke personal elemity. THURSDAY, DECEMBER 8, 1861. THE LABOR QUESTION .- What can be done to prevent our labor from leaving the State? This we have already urged as a question of vital Importance to our farmers, and it is scarcely o less importance to everybody else, for all parties are concerned in the subject of labor and of food. In the slave-holding counties labor is very scarce and under present eircumstances it must become still searcer every day. We have heretofere pointed out the trouble, perplexity, and inconvenience, and there is no necessity for a repetition. The pressure is upon every farmer and planter in the State who has been using slave labor. Every one who is not purblind, sees the trouble we are in and feels the necessity of doing something. And yet there is great danger that nothing will be done, for what is everybody's husiness is nobody's business. There is great danger that this important subjeet will be neglected and passed over by the people and the Legislature, and deferred to another year's action. And there are other eerious causes of apprehension from inconsiderate and immature expedients to defer au evil day, from a dislike to grapple with a question whileh staggers prescience and statesman ship, or from an unwillingness or Inability to root up prejndices, and change a system which permeates our constitution, our laws, and our economies. But we cannot afford to be deaf to the call of necessity; we cannot Ignore the prevalent anarchy, and the certainty that it will become still more intolerable. We eannot con eeal the fact that the grown negroes remaining and those who are growing up and will soon be able to labor will leave the State. We know that they will assuredly continue to do so from day to day, and from week to week, and from month to month, nuless some measures are taken to prevent the exodus. We are not discussing the restion of slavery at all; that question is not beforens or before the people, and especially for the slave-holders of the State it matters not whether slavery be right or wrong morally, right or wrong economically. We are involved in a certain predicament which is not of our own seeking. and the only question under our consideration now is how to get out of it. By the Constitu tion of Kentucky slavery eannot be reached by ealling a convention, under five years, even if | far easier to approach an officer with stars upon we were to suppose that every man in the Commonwealth should desire its termination under the pressure of our present unfortunate circumstances. moralized, the pernicions influences of breaking and evading laws will vitiate the whole fabric Now, the question returns-it cannot be evaded-what shall be done? The State Constitution says: "The General Assembly shall have no rower to pass laws for the emancipation of slaves without the consent of their owners, or without paying their owners previous to such enuncluation a full equivalent in money for the slaves so emancipated, and providing for their removal from the State." It follows clearly from this provision of the Constitution that the Legislature may emancipate the slaves with the consent of their owners, or by paying them previously to such emancipation a full equivalent, &c. The latter alternative we take for granted to be impossible. The Legislature eannot and will not undertake to make compensation to the owners of slaves, nor will Congress. It only remaius, therefore, that, if anything he done, it must be done by the consent of the owners. Now, the implication of the constitutional provision Just quoted is positive, that the Legislature may emancipate slaves with the consent of the owners. The whole disposition of the matter, therefore, is in the hands of those owners. If they desire the unlversal demoralization and anarchy which we have pointed out, they have only to let things remain as they are; they will follow as surely as night follows day. There is apparently no help for it. But if they do not desire such a state of affairs, then they should bestir themselves and make their wishes known to the Legislature at its approaching session. That body will do nothing without being strongly prompted. It will do notbling on its own responsibility. Its members are proverbially timid of assuming responsibilities. The people have been far in advance of our General Assemblies ever since the rebellion refer the question back to the people. It might also pass an aet freeing the slaves of such persons as are willing to record their consent in a specified manner. This would not infringe on the property rights of any one. None could complain, and it would be strictly constitutional. As we have heretofore stated, we are utterly opposed to any action in this or any other matter not strictly in accordance with the Constitution. Let us bear any evil rather than violate that instrument, however unwise or unreasonable its provisions may be, and it is certainly both nowise and unreasonable to demand five years time to effect the smallest alteratlon in the Constitution, however argent might be the necessity. The rebels would have soon overeeme this difficulty by a sovereignty convention or a self-constituted legislative body, such as assembled at Russellville in 1861. We utterly repudlate and abhor all such action. Let na, we again repeat, abide by the bond, regardless of the consequences. We do not understand that the constitutional provision requiring the emancipated slaves to the State, for the present, as laborers, and be subjected to wise, judiclous, humane, vet stringent laws of labor, which would be far hetter for us and for them, better than their present loose and demoralized condition, and better than black race to Africa, as has been the aim of the information that Sherman had gone down the Colonization Society, a measure of the on a pleasure trip to the sea coast, but left them greatest benefit to them, and in accordance | to receive him, and they opened the ball promptly.

with our highest ultimate interests also, as well as prejudiess. Men's prejudices as well as Iways be consulted by practical state men. rong-headed theorists would drive the ploughss of the consequences, tearing up the founations, overthrowing the superstructure and ev all fall lnto the ditch made by their own eories. But practical statesmen, who wish to form and improve the State, have diligent reard to all that exists—the Constitution, the laws and institutions resting on It, and even to he prejudices and wrong notions of the people All must be respected and our course directed coordingly. It is therefore a corollary that the medial action for the removal of Kentucky's elogs upon her labor system should be initiated. irected and perfected by Kentucky herself. We have to consider it in an economic point of view, and the highest order of statesmanship must be directed to the work. The zerlons chilanthropists, who toil to accomplish a humanitarian reform, will greatly embarrass present legislative action, but they will have an extended field for subsequent work when the slaves are emancipated. That will require wisdom and energy to solve. General Grant's arrival in Washington was marked by the same quiet and absence of dis-play as his visit to New York, the only thing musual about it being the special car in which he was conveyed to the National Capital. In his arrival at the depot he took a corner in horse-car for the hotel, and was entirely over-ooked by those around him, who, although ex-ecting him to arrive, did not lunagine the quiet lividual in the corner was the veritable Lieu-nant-General. A venerable gentleman who copposite to the great military chieftain, and o at the time was peering directly into the heral's eyes, let loose the remark to a neigh-that he never saw the General, but had great and for him, and would have a peep at him, possible; and a modest young mun, looking I into the General's face, volunteered the remark "that he came on the train just in," and that he "knew the General intimately. He would know him amour a thousand, and that ne was not on that train.'

The mnostentatious manner of the Lientenant General might be studied with good effect by some officers of smaller note. It is a potent principle that true greatness is always modest and retiring. Men of sense occupying important positions, while preserving their digulty, never make an unusual display of themselves, or assume a pompous, overbearing manner in ransacting business. As a general thing, it is his shoulder, in a business matter, than it is to obtain an interview with, and a civil reply from ne who has not yet risen above the line authority, and, being blessed with more conceil able, and act as pompous and dignified as kings august presence with all the forms of royalty After an incident of this kind you are more Let our officers imitate the example of their Lieutenant-General, and they will be more honored and respected.

The rebel Secretary of the Treasury Treas holm does not minee matters in his late report to the Confederate Congress. He tells that august body that "nuless a uniform and stable value can be given to the Treamry notes, the efforts to earry on the war through their instrumentality must of necessity be abandoned Acquiescence in its deplorable depreciation l to court the ruin to which it leads. One hun dred and thirty-live dollars in eurreney, the price obtained for one hundred dollars in six per eeut bonds, is equal to six dollars only la specie and to sell the bonds at this rate is in reality to dispose of them at uinety-four per cent discount; or, in other words, to give a bond of one huu dred dollars in consideration of the loan of six dollars," What would be thought of a merchant who went into the market to get his note for one hundred dollars discounted for six dol_ lars? And supposing that his safe was entirely empty, and that he owed everybody in his employ, he would be "nsed up." Such is the condition of the rebel Treasury; it can get but six dollars in specie for Its hond of one hundred, its vanlts are empty, and its armies have not been laid for twelve or fifteen months.

Jeff. Davis has communicated to the rebel Senate the fact that no intimation, direct or indirect, has been raceived by the Confederacy of a willinguess on the part of any State of the United States to go into convention with the States of the Confederacy for the purpose of negotiating a peace or consulting as to the best method of effecting a cessation of hostilities, or for any purpose whatever. Of eourse not. A State is precluded by our Constitution from enbroke out, and the present one would tering into any treaty, alliance, or confederaprobably summon sufficient courage to tion, or any agreement or compact with another State. The rebel Senate passed its resolution of inquiry, so framed as to deceive the people and produce the impression that the United States were unwilling to negotiate for peace on any terms, but were determined to wage a vindietive and desolating war. Peace can be obtained any day. Let the rebel armies by down their arms and submit to the laws, and there will he an immediate eessation of hostilities.

The Washington correspondent of the Boston Post, says that Roger A. Pryor, when he reached the National capital, inquired carnestly after Mr. Seaton, the venerable editor of the National Intelligeneer, and added that he felt confident Mr. Seaton would exert himself to proenre hls release. It happened that just about the moment when the ex-Congressman, ex-General was making these observations, it was announced in Mr. Seaton's office that Pryor was taken prisoner, and Mr. Seaton exclaimed energetically-"That is the man who brought

The Herald ealls Kentucky 'a State which, since the beginning of the war, has been as erratic in her movements as If guided by a drunken Bourbon leader, brinful all the time of the real old Bourbon whiskey." That is a mistake, the policy of Kentucky, when assumed at the be sent ont of the State applies to those emancipated by the consent of their owners. It with underlining firmness. Our prond and loyseems to apply only to those for whom a full alold State never for one Instant wavered he equivalent in money has been paid by the State her devotion to the Union, while the record of Government. All sneh freed persons, so volun. the Herald shows that it was for submitting to tarily emancia ated, might remain, therefore, in the Davis government, and for adopting the Confederate Constitution.

Sometime since Gen. Sherman said: "If Hood will cross the Tennessee river, I will furnish him rations," Now, Hood accepted this as slavery itself. We hope the slave-holders of an invitation to a tea party, and came with over Kentucky will take this great matter into serious consideration. Provision should be contemplated for the prospective removal of the fifty thousand men to participate in Sherman's Tile Springfield Republican says the project of interests, and interests as well as duties, must electing the President by a direct popular vote, instead of by electors chosen by the States, is hare of their Utopian schemes through the have some advantages over the present system, tual and existing institutions of society, regard- and, also, some very great disadvantages. The President would be quite as l'kely to be chosen by the minority as under the present system, aving all in ruins;—blind leaders of the blind, and, in some eases, a very small minority might cl ct. With half a dozen or more candidates in the field, as there would be very likely to be In such case, the States of one section, South or West, voting upon a single candidate, would be able to elect him, and the natural result would be a division of parties purely sectional. The West, being the stronger, could take perminent possession of the Government, or might be disted only by the combination of the weaker ections against the stronger, and thus we should have more violent sectional jealousles and hatreds engendering the Union than everbefore. There would also be greater temptations to dishonesty, and the vote of a State for its favorite candidate could be heaped up to almost any extent. But the most serious objection to the proposed change is, that it would contribute to that centralization of power in the General Government which is soon to be, if It has not already become, our chief danger. The reaction against the Southern perversion of the State rights' doctrine has led to a denial of the doctrine altogether by a certain class of our politicians, and f present tendencles proceed unchecked, we hall soon have separate States only in name. All power will be absorbed and consolidated in the Central Government. And the election of President by the direct vote of the people would be an ignoring of the States, and if the idea that the States are to be represented in the Government, as well as the people in their eapacity of citizens of the United States, that could not fail to be detrimental to the theory on which the Union was originally formed, and to endanger is permanence. The present mode of electing President was adopted after the most careful and thorough consideration and debate, and is about as just and as safe as ean be devised. If t is to be made more democratie, the most obvious change would be to require only a plurality vote in the electoral college to effect an election, and so avoid the reference of the dection to Congress in any case, and to provide GENERAL REPORT OF THE BUSINESS OF THE for a vote of the people for electors in each State, instead of allowing the Legislatures to decide whether they or the people shall east the electoral votes of their State.

elosely heseiged in the capital of Tennessee. The rebels are busy night and day fortifying, and their works are growing quite formidable. Iu the rear of their lines they are enforcing the eonserlption with great energy. Their ranks are being swelled by hundreds of conscripts. Thronghont Tnesday night General Thomas was very busy shelling the rehel lines. From dusk until yesterday morning the boom of cannon cehoed throughout the streets of Nashville. The vigorous fire elicited but a feeble reply from the enemy. General Forrest's eavalry are said to be very busy attempting to eross the Cumberland river. Gen. Thomas is watching his movements closely, and his entire cavalry force is employed on the north bank of the Cumberland sconting up and down the river. It was reported yesterday morning that Forrest had succeeded in crossing in the vicinity of Carthage by the aid of pontoons. The story is not believed. Gen. Cooper's command and the brigade of colored troops were still at Clarksydle vesterday morning. The report of Forrest being across the river was sufficiently weighty to prevent them from moving up to Nashville. If Hood fails to throw his army into Kentucky, it is thought that he will make an eagle-like swoop down upon Murfreeshoro, and endeavor to eapture General Ronsseau and his command by a sudden and terrible assau't with an overwhelming force. Whatever may be his designs, General Thomas is watching him closely, and will give him more trouble than perhaps he anticpates.

THE NEWSBOY AND HIS ENTERPRISE.-We frequently have observed persons stop a newsboy

on the street, take a paper from him, deliberately read the despatches, with the ragged young urchin waiting impatiently, looking wistfully up into the cold, hard face, and often shivering in the cold, and then return the paper to him and pass on without purchasing it. Do such persons justly consider how much they are robbing the newsboy by an act of this kind? The papers are the individual property of the boy. He has purchased them at the office, paid his gery for them, and if he does not sell them loss results to him, and him alone. They e Lis exclusive property. He bnys them for the news that they contain, and for the news he sells them to parties on the street. It is to his interest to be delained in his sales as little as possible. Telegraphic news Is in demand so long as it is fresh from the wires and the press-room. It is soon read, soon digested, and almost as soon forgotten. In effecting its sale, with more than a hundred different competitors on the streets. the boy must move rapidly and make his hargains with great despatch. Every minute is precious to him. An edition is often sold in less than a quarter of an hour after it leaves the countlug-room. Then, when an individual stops a newsboy on the street, detains him while he reads the despatches, and returns the paper to him without buying it, he not only rohs the young speculator of the news of a single paper, but 1 erhaps of the time in which he could effect the sale of a half-dozen more The loss is to the boy alone—the poor shivering urchiu, who struggles with poverty, and, perhaps, by his exertions and profits, supports a mother, and keeps want from the door of the humble home. We write this hrief article for the henefit of the newsboy; we plead in his be-

We only ask them either to remove the "stumblingblocks" of filth or to Issue a proclamation forb'dding the adies the streets, and to furnish stilts and ferryboats for the male portion of the community. We admit somewhat of selfishness prompts this feeling; slnce, in our walks "around town" in these "wet rains" and this muddy been considerate enough to grant us even onefourth (we are a small man) of the very Indifferent passways. Passing complacently along Broadway our eye-a single eye-is greeted with palatial residences, and "fair occupants" resting with easy grace, "to the manor born," upon their own thresholds-gay, happy, and free from the dark, cold, and solitary homes of the poor, with a bright "light upon their hearth," and no drumming moth erecplug there. Here and there we see a splendid mansion, ornamented with a Polly Ann or a Naucy Jane, ever on exhibition at the front door; while, upon the lintel, we never fail to read the emblazoned word "Shoddy." Passing on, we hear the clauking sword and see the bright, threatening bayonet of a guard, whose measured pace is kept up continually in front of some lonely house, whose halls a pure and holy love, tears start to my eyes, and no longer recognize the firm foot of the master. the pleasant voice and busy hands of a kind mis tress, nor the sweet prattlings of bright-eyed, sunsounded through its length in their merry-gowilds. Coal-dust thick, dust from the street in clouds, drays not few, clamorous newsboys many; interesting "old ladies," apples, chestnuts, grapes, yarn soeks, and strings of blue and red heads piled up in striking confufusion upon every corner; quite a "power" of neck-breaking boxes heaped up in chaotic mass. Pleased to escape such a bedlam, we are glad to improve an opportunity to visit the Kentucky School of Medicine, as we were courteously invited to do, and hear those skilful teachers and professors lecture. We did so, and heard six lectures that were not only replete with scientific research, but were marked throughout with an earnest and untiring desire to give practical knowledge the utmost weight. and to impress It upon the minds of the large class in attendance. We never recollect observing upon the part of the teachers of any institution such honest zeal in impressing knowledge upon their students. More affable gentlemen we have seldom met. PARIS MATTERS. [Paris Correspondence of the Montreal Herald.]

Paris, Nov. 10, 1861. As Winter is evidently setting in unnsually early a good many members of the fashionable world have already returned to town; but it is now considered necessary, by all who aspire to that designation, to remain en villegiatura until the end of December, and, consequently, most of those who have returned to Paris do their best to keep their return a secret. Very few salons have ventured to reopen their doors; and the all-important decrees of the great dressmakers, male and female, have not yet been issued. The Court-despite, It is whispered, the veto of M. Fonld-has gone to Compeigne, and will remain there until the return of Christmas and New Year's day brings it back to the Tuil eries. The prudent objections of the longheaded Minister of Finance appear to have been overruled by the Empress, who has a tolerably strong will of her own, and whose pride, hos pitable instincts, and love of amusement would have equally suffered had she heen compelled from economical necessities, to dispense with transformed hinting lodge of the "Long-haired Kings," who conquered Gaul from its Roman Patti and a host of other stars have returned to the operatic heaven, and are blazing away in full splendor, in old parts and in new ones; the great "success" of the coming season, in the musical line, being probably destined to add a new leaf to the lanrels of the regretted author of "The Prophet." The opera left by Meyerbeer, after being so long looked for under the name of "L'Africaine," will be brought out under that of "Vasea de Gama," a change made by Meyerbeer shortly before his death. Meantime, the brilliant success of "Rolland at Roncesvalles," the new opera which has placed its young antbor at the head of living French composers, is filling the French opera to its numost capacity, despite the continued absence of the world of fashion. The receipts of the opera on the first representation of "Roland" amounted to 10,177f., to 11,511f. in its second hearing, and to 11,517f. on its third, being the highest receipts ever taken at its doors. Previous to the appearance of his work, M. Mermet had been known as the composer of a few chaming songs, but no one gave bim credit for the possession of the many high qualities required to make up a successful operatic creator. The appearance of so important a creation has, therefore, taken everybody by "Hold on, Peter," said we, remembering that surprise. The new chef d'auvre is eminently melodions, abounding in nirs which on first hearing them, take their place in one's memory so completely as to seem like old friends. There is plenty of science in the new composer; but the laws of harmony are made-as, alas! Is not always the case-to subserve their true end, which is the giving of body to the complex creation of which melody is the sonl. The Emperor, who is greatly bored by much of the learned noise he is obliged to listen to, was present at the first repre-entation of the new opera, and was so greatly Richard! Those who have the pleasure of tasting of the little tin cans, so neatly strapped together, or which are to be escorted by hunks of hard hread, going through the streets just before the regution dinner-hour of the French soldier, can best appreciate the intensity of the chackling with which those lucky dogs must have welcomed every meal thus seemed for them by the ready-witted audacity of their comrade.

It seems that the Czar, walking out with his plendid black dog and one of his boys, the day ival, he met two of the Chasseurs of the Guard, o whom he spoke familiarly for a few moments, omplimenting them on the way they had maœuvred on the preceding day. On which one of them, an old veteran, who has passed his life in the army, replied: "Ah, sire, that's nothing. if you saw us on the field of hattle you would think It a very different thing." The soldier vidently spoke without malice prepense; but the words may well have made the Czar wince a little. [Correspondence of the Louisville Journal.] FAMILIAR LETTER FROM NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Dec. 1. At no time of the year is this city more gay and attractive to strangers than at the present To be sure, the "height of the season" does not set in until later, but still these first soirees of le bean mande are to my mind the most pleasant and attractive. Everybody now is bright and sparkling. The summer jannts have added rech bloom and eprightliness to all the young ladies, and evidences of Saratoga, Newport, Sharon, West Point, Long Branch, &c., may be seen all around you; and, then, what a charm ing fund of conversation all this affords! The first grand inangural soirce of the seaso

Twenty-eighth street. The Invitations were two weeks in advance, and we were all in such a state of excitement about lt! The old story over again, "What in the world am I to wear?" Aunt Mary insisted upon it that my blue silk was the most becoming, but cousin Lon. said it was old-fashioned the usual brilliant slx weeks of sojonrn in the (although it was only made last whiter); that all the tyle now was tunic, and that I must have one. It was very easy to say "Get one," but the trouble was how, for ma, hless her heart, thought my party tronsseau was ample enough before I left home. However, after discussing the matter, one morning, at breakfast, all de this city in safety, and will soon be introduced eided that I must have a pink tunic. So uncle o the admiration of the public at the Napoleon | advanced the eash, and down we went to Stewart's. The material was bought after the most eritical examination by gas-light, but such a turning and twisting as we gave it. Lou would stand off at various distances, and then, throwing her head, ever so gracefully, on one side, would bring her practised eye to bear upon the various shades of pink presented. At last she pronounced one piece the very thing-very nuch, by the way, to my relief-for I was so tired looking at it that I really began to think I should get out of conceit of it before it should be made up. In due time M'me Jaubert sent home the dress. Lou had given full directions about the trimming, fearing, I suppose, to trust the matter to me. It was, indeed, a tunie, abounding in a multitudinous varicty of points. I thought I should look a la Chinoise In It. However, I wore it and as I took the last lingering look in the glas I fancied I should look as fine as anybody. But O how grievously disappointed I was when I made my entree at the party. It seemed to me that everybody looked finer than I. Such exquisite dresses, and such a superfluity of all sorts of beautiful wearing apparel I have not seen for many a day. I saw no "rollerres," however, that surpassed that of your reigning beauty in Louisville. I daren't even give you the initial letter, but if any of your readers are particularly auxious to know, they must hunt for it among my succeeding letters. En p is sant, it is on-dit here that the lady in question i coming on to spend the winter. Hardly anything affords me more plea han an afternoon promenade from about the Fifth Avenue Hotel to Ball, Black, & Co.'s, o Broadway. The usual route is down Fifth Avenue to Fourteenth street, and thence up to Broadway. On one of these fine days, of which we have bad a snecession lately, you will see that world of fashion which don't keep their carriage crowding along as if they were out on a shopping expedition. In nine cases out of ten music nicely wrapped in a roll, which she carbeing that it is not only a great assistance in as his genius, is a warm admirer of the new opwalking gracefully, but also a sort of semblaned era, the success of which, as a matter of course of shopping which poor us, who are not o Shoddy, cannot do every day. I frankly own to have already caught this Music infection, and must say I rather like it, especially at times when both parasol and muif are superfluous, After the first few days of our walking expediions discovered that Lou was managing the matter as to just about meet the young heaux wh were returning from their various places of busiess. She kept insisting upon it that it was mere seeldent that we met these nice young fellows, who often joined us in our walk, but still I rather thick the whole affair on her part was planned

I shall have tauch to say hereafter on the subject of teilettes, for the benefit of the lady readers of the Journal. At present the subject is too voluminous to more than just touch upon.

The all-absorbing excitement here is the retent diabolical plot to set lire to the whole city. It is the leading topic of conversation wherever you go. I consider myself a Southerner, although a native of Kentucky, and so obeyed the recent order of General Dix, and went straight down to his office and enrolled my name. About two hundred are already recorded, but few, bowever, from Kentucky.

If you are going to want these letters, you must leave me a whole page next week.
